

Dear Thinkers of the Universe,

It has come to our attention that time as it has been traditionally understood was a human mislabelling, much like the infamous Pluto planet debate. Just as Pluto was once classified as a planet due to early observational limitations, time was wrongly classified as a fundamental entity rather than what it truly is: a measurement system designed for Earth's societal movements.

Why Time is Not a Universal Truth:

1. Time does not exist as a force or object in the universe.
 - There is no evidence of a cosmic "clock" that dictates events.
 - Things simply move, shift, and transform based on interactions—not "time."
2. The Universe functions on motion and distance, not time.
 - Space expands, stars collapse, particles interact—all without requiring "time" as a separate dimension.
 - What we perceive as "time passing" is simply the observation of distance changing at various scales.
3. Time was invented for human convenience, not cosmic necessity.
 - Earth's cycles (day/night, seasons, react/decay) led early civilizations to divide movement into measured segments.
 - The 24-hour day, the 60-minute hour, and the 7-day week are completely arbitrary.
 - Other civilizations have structured "time" differently, proving it is not an absolute truth—just a tool.

The Correction:

Going forward, time should no longer be referenced as a universal dimension. Instead, it should be understood as a localized measurement system specific to Earth's cycles.

And note that countries just choose when to change the time whenever "they" want. The universe does not run "on time", it simply moves.

Much like Pluto's reclassification, this is not a loss. It is a refinement of truth. Humanity has outgrown its early definitions, and it is THE MOMENT to embrace the reality that what we called "time" was just a human-made metric for movement, AND PERHAPS ENEMY GENERATION.

Welcome to a world with proper measurements.

Sincerely,

Everyone who isn't the "SlimeSet"

"In 1852, an electric clock was installed at Greenwich. Besides controlling the 24-hour Gate Clock and the Greenwich Time Ball, this master clock also controlled, by 'galvanism', a clock at London Bridge station four miles away, and a Time Ball at the offices of the Eastern Telegraph Co. in the Strand"
